GLUTEN & GRAINS HAVE CHANGED QUICKER THAN WE HAVE!

Gluten intolerance has been on the rise for years, and this highly uncomfortable problem doesn't only affect those who have full-blown celiac disease. With grain crops being hybridized to produce stronger and more extensive crops, our bodies haven't had the time to fully adapt to these newly engineered changes. Digestive issues with modern day gluten and grains are a growing problem and more than just a fad. In fact, according to Dr. Perlmutter, Board-Certified Neurologist and Fellow of the American College of Nutrition, most people who are borderline gluten intolerant often test negative for celiac disease. He goes on saying that 100% of humans activate zonulin (a protein) when exposed to gluten, which in turn increases gut permeability. This means every one of us can benefit from the clearance of gluten from our diets and intestines.*

GLUTEN SAFE™ is further fortified with the digestive enzymes "amylase and glucoamylase," both known to aid in the digestion of other carbohydrate sources, and protease enzymes known to help with protein digestion.
